

WHITE MAN ARRESTED IN MURDER

Man, Whose Name is Unknown, to be Brought Here this Afternoon

QUESTION 3 NEGROES

All Deny Any Connection In Kidney Murder Case

A white man, his name unknown to local officers, was to be brought here today to be questioned for his part in the brutal murder of John Kidney, 75, Monroe-twp farmer, last Thursday. The man was taken into custody by Franklin-co deputy sheriffs at the instigation of Detective Larry Van Skaik who has been assisting local authorities in the investigation.

Although details are not known the man is suspected of being the one who drove the automobile to the Monroe-twp farm where the atrocious murder and robbery were perpetrated.

The man was held in Franklin-co jail until local authorities called for him.

QUESTION THREE

In the meantime the prosecutor, sheriff and sheriff's deputies were firing an unending stream of questions at three negroes held here in connection with the murder. Two

ONE WEEK AGO

It was just one week ago today that the badly battered body of John Kidney, 75, was found in his home by a neighbor, Mrs. Charles Grice. The beaten invalid sister was found on the couch near her brother.

In the seven days since the discovery of the atrocious crime authorities have made rapid steps in their investigation. The solution of the case is thought to hinge on several arrests which have been made and several which are expected to follow.

FOURTH RELEASED

The men were arrested at Hanford, negro settlement in East Columbus. Tuesday evening by Franklin-co deputies and lodged in the Franklin-co jail until Sheriff Radcliff, Prosecutor Crist and the deputies arrived. Three men were then brought here while a fourth held in Columbus was given his freedom.

Despite continuous grilling the men refuse to talk. All deny knowing anything of the robbery and murder.

Then came the report that the white man was arrested. He is thought to have been "hobnobbing" with the negroes and his arrest and questioning might throw some light on the affair.

Heroic Mayor's Solution of Unemployment Problem

Mayor Marvin of Syracuse, N. Y., Advocates Suspension of Female Municipal Employees Who Are Supported by Husbands. Needy to Get Their Jobs.

MAYOR MARVIN

Epic poems have been written of deeds less heroic than that enacted by Mayor Rolland Marvin, of Syracuse, N. Y., who recently faced 165 women employees of the city and gave them their choice of taking a year's leave of absence or being dismissed. The Mayor's action was the culmination of a plan to relieve distress caused by unemployment in the city. His scheme calls for the suspension, voluntary or otherwise, of all married women on the municipal payroll who are adequately provided for by their husbands, the positions thus vacated to be given to men or women who are in dire need. To the eternal credit of the women concerned he it is known that practically all agreed with Mayor Marvin and declared their intention of applying for leave of absence. Of course, there were a few dissenters, but it would be nothing less than miraculous if 165 women agreed upon any one subject. The Mayor's plan has attracted nationwide attention and it is expected that not only other municipalities but also big industrial concerns will follow the Mayor's lead. Representatives of the American Federation of Labor are enthusiastic in praise of the scheme, asserting that it becomes general the backbone of the "unemployment dragon" will be broken. Whatever the outcome, one can but commend the courage of Mayor Marvin. Victoria Crosses have been granted for less.

HILL TO LOSE SIGHT OF EYE; HIT BY GLASS

Colored Man Driving Auto Is Injured as Owl Breaks Windshield

FACE BADLY CUT

Dead Bird Only Thing Found to Cause Accident

Burt Hill, 32, well known colored man, suffered painful injuries Wednesday evening when an owl struck the windshield of the automobile he was driving. Glass struck Hill about the face, and as a result the man may lose the sight of his right eye. The left eye was also cut but it is thought he will not lose its sight.

Hill was driving toward this city just south of Thatcher Wednesday evening in the Essex coach owned by Milt Smallwood. He was accompanied by Bane Bass and Roy Smith, both colored. Just before the car reached Thatcher something struck the windshield and Hill put his hands to his face and told Bass, who was riding beside him, to stop the car. Hill was hurried to the office of Dr. Harry D. Jackson where the wound was treated and Dr. Jackson with Dr. E. S. Shane treated him for his injuries.

He was taken to his home. Hill is the father of three children.

HEARD NO SHOT

Occupants of the Essex with Hill were of the opinion that someone was "laying" for the injured man and shot through the windshield at him. No report of a gun shot was heard by any of the occupants and no one was seen. It was also thought that someone might have thrown a rock but no trace of a rock could be found on the road where the accident occurred.

The only trace Sheriff Charles Radcliff and Deputy Bob Armstrong, investigating the accident, could find was an owl which was lying dead in the road, with traces of glass in its wings. The bird had been read only a short time, an examination disclosed, and the conclusion of the officers was that the owl had caused the accident.

STORIES CONFLICT

Milt Smallwood loaned his Essex to Hill about 4 p. m. Wednesday, he said. The men were reported by Smallwood to have gone toward Laurelville to obtain Christmas trees. Bane Bass told officers that they had been hunting on a farm in Salt Creek township that Hill had a license. He and Smith walked along with Hill, Bass claimed. The fact that the men were not returning until between 7:30 and 8 o'clock caused Sheriff Radcliff to question the report that they were hunting.

Slash Ordered by Executive Would Save $5,000,000; Move Is Drastic

NEED OF CUT CITED

State Schools Exempt In White's Declaration

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 17.—Heads of all state departments were ordered by Governor George White today to reduce their 1932 expenditures 15 per cent below the appropriations made by the 89th general assembly.

The slash ordered by the governor is one of the most drastic in recent history of state government in Ohio. The reductions probably will total almost $5,000,000.

"As governor of Ohio, I take the positive stand that it is neither good business nor common sense in these times of acute depression to spend more than we take in," Mr. White said in a statement announcing his plans. "The state of Ohio should live within its shrunken income—just as hundreds of thousands of Ohio families are compelled to do."

Today's order for a reduction follows a similar order for a 7 per cent cut which was made for 1931 budgets several months ago.

The only substantial exception to the order will be the educational institutions which will continue to take a 7 per cent cut.

SCHOOLS HIT

"The reason for exempting the educational institutions is that the legislature cut them more severely than it did the other departments of the state department, and furthermore, their salary contracts are all made for the current school year so that no substantial reduction could be made effective before next October," the governor's statement said.

To meet the reductions which the governor has ordered, several departments will be compelled to get down salaries or discharge employees, it was believed. Few departments were able to meet the 1931 reduction without difficulty.

In giving out his order, the governor mentioned that "my administration inherited from my predecessor a deficit of four and one-half million dollars. We have paid that deficit from 1931 revenues in addition to the normal expenditures. We are determined to operate during 1932 on the revenues from existing sources."

IS HARD TASK

His statement also admitted that the order may not be complied with easily.

"This will require more drastic economies than have heretofore been necessary, but I propose to see that they are made," he said. "This is no time to increase tax burdens."

The governor also emphasized the necessity of differentiating between what may be termed actual necessities and what may be merely desirable.

"If this involves the curtailment or the elimination of some of the services formerly rendered by the state when the people could afford to pay for them, we shall have to accommodate ourselves to that result. I believe that our state taxes are high enough, and I propose to carry on the state government with the income available from the present sources," he said.

The July estimates, the governor said, were "sound and conservative" but recent developments showing that 1932 will bring $3,000,000 or $4,000,000 less than was anticipated makes the cut necessary.

NOTE IS CLUE IN 3 DEATHS

Bodies of Trio Found in Geauga Lake Cottage; Unfinished Scribbling Found.

AKRON, O., Dec. 17.—"This did not turn out . . ."

Upon this unfinished note, possibly penned by a young woman who committed suicide in the same cottage three weeks ago, authorities today pinned their hopes for a solution of the brutal double murder and suicide which was discovered in a Geauga Lake cottage on the Summit-co line near here yesterday.

The note, forming only the slenderest of a clue, was found in the wrecked interior of the cottage where the bodies of three men—William Szepina, 34, known as "Bugs" Spaney; Frank Matuszak, 46, known as Pat Murphy; and Unton W. Kornet—were found sprawled by friends of Murphy. Investigators believe the note may have been left by Mrs. Jennie Fields, 26, who committed suicide in the cottage last November 27 by swallowing poison. Efforts were made today to determine whether the two tragedies may be linked.

Reconstructing the events of the double murder and suicide today, authorities were convinced that Spaney shot and killed his companions and then took his own life. Spaney had an empty revolver clutched in his hand when the bodies were found.

FEAR ACTRESS IS NEAR DEATH

Pola Negri Given Blood Transfusion Today In Effort To Save Her Life.

SANTA MONICA, Cal., Dec. 17.—Physicians today resorted to blood transfusions in an effort to save the life of Pola Negri, following an emergency operation for intestinal obstruction.

Miss Negri was in a semi-conscious condition today when she opened her eyes and smiled faintly at physicians and nurses. Recovery remained in doubt. Priests administered holy communion shortly before the operation.

CONDITION UNCHANGED

"Miss Negri's condition is unchanged," read an official bulletin, "although she is resting a little more comfortably today."

She was operated upon late yesterday afternoon. Studio officials and friends awaited anxiously near the operating room, nervous about the outcome. Miss Negri's condition was aggravated on Tuesday by an attack of ptomaine poisoning that followed appendicitis from which she had been a chronic sufferer for several months.

She collapsed in the studio office following a preview of her first talking picture soon to be released. After a delirious night in her Hollywood hotel suite physicians were summoned. They brought her to Santa Monica hospital where an operation was decided upon following a consultation of specialists.

VIOLATORS OF STATE BUTTER LAW PAY FINES

Astounding Examples of Adulterated Butter Found by Inspector

56 ARE REPORTED

Some Already Ordered Into Court and Fined

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 17.—An investigation ordered secretly by Governor George White several months ago has disclosed "astounding" examples of the sales of adulterated butter in Ohio, W. D. Leech, chief of the state division of food and dairies, reported today.

The annual loss of the citizens of Ohio due to the violation discovered by Leech and his inspectors was estimated in the report at $2,000,000.

56 OUT OF 100

Of one hundred samples of butter brought at random in the state 56 were found to be adulterated, Leech said.

"These samples were representative of all classes of butter on market within this state," the report stated.

Eighteen of the 56 violators found have already been ordered into court and 'it will interest you,' Leech said, "to know that every one of these eighteen pleaded guilty and paid their fine. Of these eighteen two were prosecuted on short weight and the remaining sixteen were having less than 79 percent butterfat. Under the law butterfat content of butter must be 80 percent."

Slash Ordered by Executive Would Save $5,000,000; Move Is Drastic

NEED OF CUT CITED

State Schools Exempt In White's Declaration

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 17.—Heads of all state departments were ordered by Governor George White today to reduce their 1932 expenditures 15 per cent below the appropriations made by the 89th general assembly.

The slash ordered by the governor is one of the most drastic in recent history of state government in Ohio. The reductions probably will total almost $5,000,000.

CITES DEPRESSION

"As governor of Ohio, I take the positive stand that it is neither good business nor common sense in these times of acute depression to spend more than we take in," Mr. White said in a statement announcing his plans. "The state of Ohio should live within its shrunken income just as hundreds of thousands of Ohio families are compelled to do."

Today's order for a reduction follows a similar order for a 7 per cent cut which was made for 1931 budgets several months ago.

The only substantial exception to the order will be the educational institutions which will continue to take a 7 per cent cut.

SCHOOLS HIT

"The reason for excepting the educational institutions is that the legislature cut them more severely than it did the other departments of the state department, and furthermore, their salary contracts are all made for the current school year so that no substantial reduction could be made effective before next October," the governor's statement said.

To meet the reductions which the governor has ordered, several departments will be compelled to cut down salaries or discharge employees, it was believed. Few departments were able to meet the 1931 reduction without difficulty.

In giving out his order, the governor mentioned that "my administration inherited from my predecessor a deficit of four and one-half million dollars. We have paid that deficit from 1931 revenues in addition to the normal expenditures. We are determined to operate during 1932 on the revenues from existing sources."

IS HARD TASK

His statement also admitted that the order may not be complied with easily.

"This will require more drastic economies than have heretofore been necessary, but I propose to see that they are made," he said. "This is no time to increase tax burdens."

The governor also emphasized the necessity of differentiating between what may be termed actual necessities and what may be merely desirable.

"If this involves the curtailment or the elimination of some of the services formerly rendered by the state when the people could afford to pay for them, I shall have to accommodate ourselves to that result. I believe that our state taxes are high enough, and I propose to carry on the state government with the income available from the present sources," he said.

The July estimates, the governor said, were "sound and conservative" but recent developments showing that 1932 will bring $3,000,000 or $4,000,000 less than was anticipated makes the cut necessary.

6 SHOPPING DAYS 'TIL CHRISTMAS

Savings Assist Nation Business

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17.—Stimulated by the release of millions of dollars in Christmas savings checks retail holiday business showed substantial gains in many sections of the country during the first half of December, the president's organization on unemployment relief reported today.

Optimistic reports came from Boston, Pittsburgh, Atlanta, Jacksonville, Miami, Mobile, Birmingham, Memphis, Louisville, Indianapolis, Detroit, Chicago, Minneapolis, St. Louis, Houston, Dallas, Des Moines, Portland, Ore., Vancouver and Los Angeles.

Holiday shopping was increasing activity in retail trade at Atlanta with the outlook promising. Building operations were substantially heavier in Florida during November, with Miami in the lead. Retail trade and collections were better at Mobile. The prospective structural steel tonnage was reported larger at Birmingham than for many weeks past.

The industrial situation improved at Louisville with an increase in employment, and seasonal gains in bituminous coal mining. Tobacco manufacturing plants enjoyed fairly satisfactory schedules and forces.

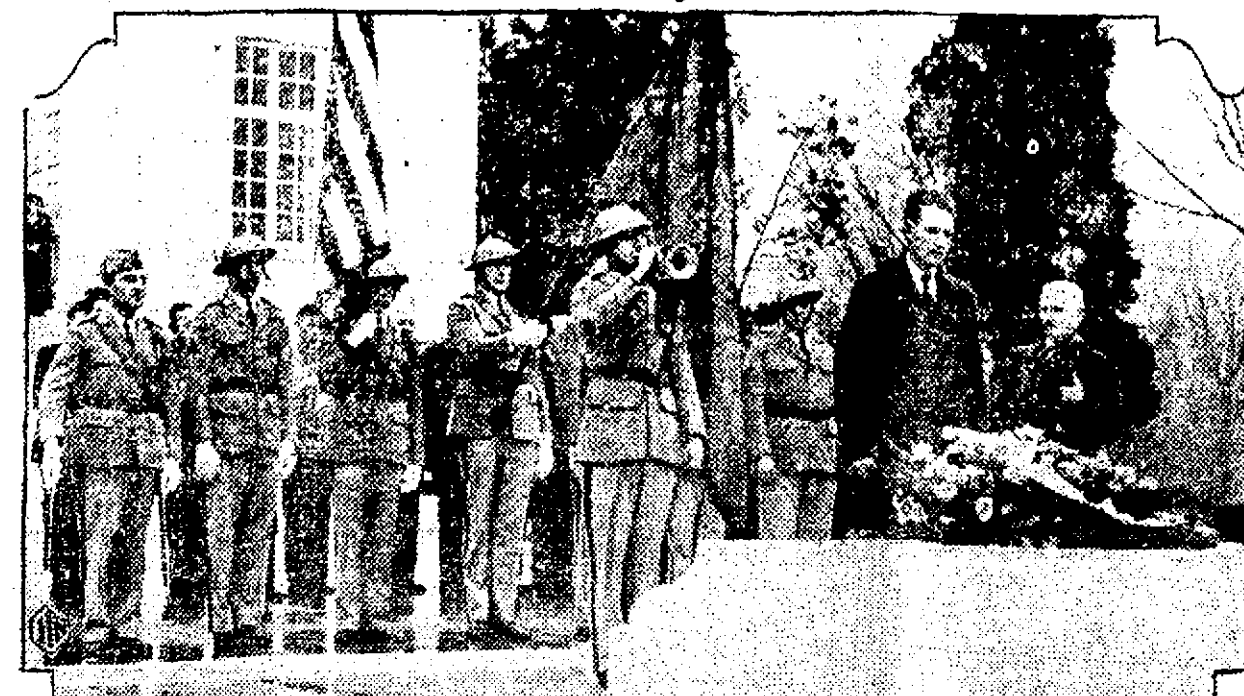

A survey of 130 firms in Indiana showed an employment gain of 1.1 per cent over a month ago, although the comparison with last year was unfavorable. Most of the increase was in retail establishments. Industrial employment in Indiana did not show losses in the last month.

At Detroit there was continued improvement in employment.

Chicago retailers had an unusually heavy week. Employment improved and there was a slight pick-up in railroad traffic. There was a decidedly better market for specialists. Cold weather stimulated retail trade at Minneapolis, while freight car loadings at St. Louis were heavier. Favorable weather stimulated trade at Houston.

From Dallas came the report that the outlook was brighter than for sometime. Banks in 23 Iowa cities paid out $1,809,300 in Christmas deposits, a larger sum than last year. The outlook for the immediate future was hopeful in Los Angeles, with conditions in the far northwest somewhat better.

"Unknown" Honored by "Bonus Marchers"

Visiting the capital for the purpose of presenting a petition to Congress for the immediate payment of their bonus certificates and the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment, delegations of World War veterans from many parts of the country made use of the opportunity to pay their respects at the Unknown Soldier's tomb in Arlington National Cemetery. Photo shows William Joyce, of the veterans' band, blowing taps, as E. J. Munce, of Oregon, commander of the "bonus marchers" places a wreath on the tomb that symbolizes the sacrifice of American manhood for the cause of peace.

Blonde Actress To Tell Of Romances With Jap

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 17.—I love Sessue Hayakawa with all my heart and soul, and nothing ever can change that beautiful affection.

People say that "east is east and west is west, and never the twain shall meet," but they're wrong. Oh, so wrong. In the case of Sessue and myself, I know that he loved me with the same searing, blinding devotion that I bore for him.

And why should we not have been bound by all the ties that bind?

I have given him everything: my youth, my beauty, my love. I have even gone down into the shadow of death for him, to bear him a son, a son he said was more precious than all the gold and honor since time began; a son to fulfill his oriental conviction that without a male heir his progress in eternity is halted.

True, Sessue, my beloved, is now on the high seas bound for Japan

while I who tried desperately to follow him ran into emigration restrictions to be stranded here in San Francisco, heartbroken, alone, and practically destitute.

Last week I stole aboard the liner Tatsuta Maru at Los Angeles just to be near Sessue, but I got into a passport gang here in San Francisco.

Now I'm just drifting with the tide, as Sessue goes on without me, and our baby remains with his Japanese wife in Los Angeles.

I don't know what I'll do. But I know one thing—as I look back—again that is that I don't regret one minute of it all.

If anyone doubts that, or doubts that love such as ours could have been beautiful, let him read on.

I'm going to lay bare the entire story in all its details, feeling that public opinion will be with me and with Sessue, when our side is in. I'm going to start with my girlhood on a Missouri farm, then detail my school days at a private school, my start in small parts with a small town stock company, my arrival finally on Broadway, and then my meeting with Sessue, while playing with him in vaudeville.

We met, we loved, we have paid, but no fiction could be stranger than our situation was at times.

I'll promise those that read this that I won't conceal a single fact of interest in my association with Mr. Hayakawa, for I feel that only in that way can a true picture be drawn that will be fair to us.

Tomorrow I'll tell what led up to my situation with this talented son of the Orient.

(Editor's note: Miss Noble continues her story in the second article of the series tomorrow).

GAS BILLS DOWN IN WARM WEATHER

Unusually warm fall weather has effected a sharp reduction in the average residential gas bill for this time of year, according to George Foerst, local manager of the gas company. Weather Bureau figures show that the mean temperature average for the month of November in this locality was over 35 per cent higher this year than that for the same period last year. Conversely, there was a 17 per cent reduction in the average residential gas bill for the month of November this year compared to that of last year.

Expressed otherwise, Foerst states that "the Gas Company's revenue has dwindled in practically the same proportion as the temperature has risen above normal. Although the weather may be fall and warm, the Gas Company must keep faith with the community, which it serves by being prepared to meet any sudden demand on the gas load due to a fall in temperature. It will be recalled that an extremely cold spell hit Central Ohio the latter part of November last year, the temperature falling rapidly during the "night" in a few hours, the gas consumption had increased approximately 50 per cent.

"With the coming of cold weather, and when temperatures come very low," adds Mr. Foerst, "gas bills will be proportionately larger—a normal situation not to be compared with the enjoyed in the recent mild November."

Savings Assist Nation Business

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17.—Stimulated by the release of millions of dollars in Christmas savings checks retail business showed substantial gains in many sections of the country during the first half of December, the president's organization on unemployment relief, reported today.

Optimistic reports came from Boston, Pittsburgh, Atlanta, Jacksonville, Miami, Mobile, Birmingham, Memphis, Louisville, Indianapolis, Detroit, Chicago, Minneapolis, St. Louis, Houston, Dallas, Des Moines, Portland, Ore., Vancouver and Los Angeles.

Holiday shopping was increasing activity in retail trade at Atlanta

with the outlook promising. Building operations were substantially heavier in Florida during November, with Miami in the lead. Retail trade and collections were better at Mobile. The prospective structural steel tonnage was reported larger at Birmingham than for many weeks past.

The industrial situation improved at Louisville with an increase in employment, and seasonal gains in bituminous coal mining. Tobacco manufacturing plants enjoyed fairly satisfactory schedules and forces.

A survey of 130 firms in Indiana showed an employment gain of 1.1 per cent over a month ago, although the comparison with last year was unfavorable. Most of the increase was in retail establishments. Industrial employment in Indiana did not show losses in the last month.

At Detroit there was continued improvement in employment. Chicago retailers had an unusually heavy week. Employment improved and there was a slight pick-up in railroad traffic. There was a decidedly better market for specialists. Cold weather stimulated retail trade at Minneapolis, while freight car loadings at St. Louis were heavier. Favorable weather stimulated trade at Houston.

From Dallas came the report that the outlook was brighter than for sometime. Banks in 23 Iowa cities paid out $1,809,300 in Christmas deposits, a larger sum than last year. The outlook for the immediate future was hopeful in Los Angeles, with conditions in the far northwest somewhat better.

"Unknown" Honored by "Bonus Marchers"

Visiting the capital for the purpose of presenting a petition to Congress for the immediate payment of their bonus certificates and the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment, delegations of World War veterans from many parts of the country made use of the opportunity to pay their respects at the Unknown Soldier's tomb in Arlington National Cemetery. Photo shows William Joyce, of the veterans' band, blowing taps, as E. J. Munce, of Oregon, commander of the "bonus marchers," places a wreath on the tomb that symbolizes the sacrifice of American manhood for the cause of peace.

Blonde Actress To Tell Of Romances With Jap

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 17.—I love Sessue Hayakawa with all my heart and soul, and nothing ever can change that beautiful affection.

People say that "east is east and west is west, and never the twain shall meet," but they're wrong; Oh, so wrong. In the case of Sessue and myself, I know that he loved me with the same searing, blinding devotion that I bore for him.

And why should we not have been bound by all the ties that bind? I have given him everything; my youth, my beauty, my love. I have even gone down into the shadow of death for him, to bear him a son, a son he said was more precious than all the gold and honor since time began; a son to fulfill his oriental conviction that without a male heir his progress in eternity is halted.

True, Sessue, my beloved, is now on the high seas bound for Japan

while I who tried desperately to follow him ran into emigration restrictions to be stranded here in San Francisco, heartbroken, alone, and practically destitute.

Last week I stole aboard the liner Tatsuta Maru at Los Angeles just to be near Sessue, but I got into a passport gangle here in San Francisco.

Now I'm just drifting with the tide, as Sessue goes on without me, and our baby remains with his Japanese wife in Los Angeles.

I don't know what I'll do. But I know one thing—as I look back—and that is that I don't regret one minute of it all.

If anyone doubts that, or doubts that love such as ours could have been beautiful, let him read on.

I'm going to lay bare the entire story in all its details, feeling that public opinion will be with me and with Sessue, when our side is in. I'm going to start with my girlhood on a Missouri farm, then detail my school days at a private school, my start in small parts with a small town stock company, my arrival finally on Broadway and then my meeting with Sessue while playing with him in vaudeville.

We met, we loved, we have paid, but no fiction could be stranger than our situation was at times. I'll promise those that read this that I won't conceal a single fact of interest in my association with Mr. Hayakawa, for I feel that only in that way can a true picture be drawn that will be fair to us.

Tomorrow I'll tell what led up to my infatuation with this talented son of the Orient.

(Editor's note: Miss Noble continues her story in the second article of the series tomorrow).

GAS BILLS DOWN IN WARM WEATHER

Unusually warm fall weather has effected a sharp reduction in the average residential gas bill for this time of year, according to George Foerst, local manager of the gas company. Weather Bureau figures show that the mean temperature average for the month of November in this locality was over 15 per cent higher this year than that for the same period last year. Conversely, there was a 17 percent reduction in the average residential gas bill for the month of November this year compared to that of last year.

Expressed otherwise, Foerst states that "the Gas Company's revenue has dwindled in practically the same proportion as the temperature has risen above normal. Although the weather may be fair and warm, the Gas Company must keep faith with the community, which it serves by being prepared to meet any sudden demand on the gas load due to a fall in temperature. It will be recalled that an extremely cold spell hit Central Ohio the latter part of November last year, the temperature falling rapidly during the night. In a few hours, the gas consumption had increased approximately 50 percent.

"With the coming of cold weather, and when temperatures become very low," added Mr. George Foerst, "gas bills will be proportionately larger—a normal situation not to be compared with that enjoyed in the recent mild November."

Mother Martha Shops-

One wonders, sometimes, how the farmer and his wife get so much accomplished when so few of them have the electrical conveniences we are accustomed to in town. But I found that there are other ways of doing things than electrically when I saw the gas engines at Barrere and Nickerson with which either the farmer or his wife can accomplish much. This store has gas engines, plating machines and farm scales. The most popular priced cream separators are the De Laval at $95 to $115. And Barrere and Nickerson have a big variety of shovels and tools of all kinds.

Here, too, I found a good line of sporting goods. I bought Henry an Official Boy Scout knife for $1.50 and John a football. They cost from $4.00 to $12.00. Dorothy wants to go in for golf, this next golf season, but as she knows more about it than I do, I'll let her choose her outfit. Sticks range in price from $2.00 to $15.00, bags from $3.50 to $15.00. And there are the Spalding line of tennis rackets at this store. Marion wants one.

When I went in a Davidson's Hardware Company I was attracted by the roomy display. The shining array of aluminum ware and electrical appliances, to say nothing of the beautiful Aladdin lamps, was pleasing. And one of the slogans here is that their goods are all in the house—not out in the weather. For the home with neither electricity or gas, these Aladdin lamps are fine. They range in price from $10.00 to $17.75. Elsie, my next door neighbor, loves birds and I have a half a notion to get her a new cage here. They cost $2.15 and $3.00. And as to kitchen cutlery and utensils, David-

Schick Test Invaluable In Checking Diphtheria

This Most Dreaded Disease Has Been Proved Preventable Through Immunization, Says Dr. Copeland, Urging Parents to Protect Their Children.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States Senator from New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

DIPHTHERIA used to be one of the most dreaded of all diseases. It afflicted young and old. Fifty years ago the deaths in this country from diphtheria were about 115 persons out of every 100,000 of the population. Last year there were less than six persons out of every 100,000.

Dr. Copeland

I am happy to say that because of immunization this disease can now be prevented. By means of the "Schick test" we can determine whether a person will contract the disease if exposed to diphtheria. The test is a simple and painless procedure. It can be given by any physician, or by the local health officer. The test consists of injecting into the skin a tiny drop of toxin. This causes a welt or swelling. If this swelling disappears quickly, the test is regarded as "negative." If the spot turns red and stays red for about a week or longer, the test is called "positive." When the test is positive it means that the individual, unless immunized, can contract the disease.

This knowledge is of tremendous value in saving the lives of children. If all children were tested and immunized against diphtheria the disease would be completely eradicated. This protection can be given at any age, even to a baby when but six months old.

The immunization is produced by the injection of a substance called "toxin-antitoxin." Three injections are given at weekly intervals. There are no serious after effects from this treatment and often the child is unaware of the injection.

Scientists agree that no child should be denied this protection. It is believed, too, that the injections should be given as early as possible. The reason for this is that diphtheria is most dangerous between the ages of six months and five years. Please remember that few children are naturally immune to diphtheria. If a child is immune to diphtheria that is all the better, of course, but the fact can only be determined by the Schick test.

your child has received a Schick test and it is found to be positive, do not hesitate or delay the injections. If your child has not been "Schicked," attend to the matter at once.

Bear in mind that diphtheria is definitely preventable. But the means of protection for your child can be applied only by your consent.

Parents who have children under school age should talk with the family doctor or health officer about this important measure. This protection is within the reach of everyone. There is no excuse for not protecting your child from diphtheria.

A LITTLE JOURNEY with BOB WHITE

This time it is to one of the quaintest little villages in all of England. The old lumbering stage-coach-driven by a stout rosey cheeked old Englishman. His costume was corduroy knee breeches, a scarlet coat and high white hat. The four prancing horses were aware that the driver considered himself of great importance. It was a lovely day in June, our seat was outside the beautiful hills and valleys of Devonshire. A boy of about twelve years sat beside me and of course asked many questions. My answers always meant to encourage his friendship.

This boy said his name was George Wardwell and his home was in Devonshire about ten miles from the quaint little village we were bound for. When I mentioned America he was quite alive as his father had recently informed him that they were to go to America as soon as their English belongings were disposed of. This boy was just returning home after a visit to friends in London. He was still more interested when he learned that our hotel had been on the strand and quite near to the "Covent Garden" flower market and that we had made several early morning visits to this market, and that we were enthusiastic over the beautiful flowers.

We were then nearing the stage-coach yard, where the drivers were putting their horses in the sheds to be fed and watered. As we alighted from the coach, a white haired red coated old master of the reins came up and spoke to the boy, calling him. "The little gentleman" and asking for his father, the boy was much pleased and said good-bye. I was quite happy as this boy had visited this strange little village and said he never tired of it. This quaint place is "Clovelly," known as "the most exquisite town in England." Clovelly's quaintness has made it widely known. The street or road to the entrance of Clovelly proper was wide. A row of tall old trees bordering it on each side. When we reached the entrance and stood more than a hundred feet above the sea, we were greeted with a view of the ocean and sky. We will never forget Clovelly. It is built in a wide ravine, with a cobble stone street down to the sea. On each side of this road the houses and inns are built all of them with porches and on the rails are boxes and pots of some of England's bright red flowers.

One of the inn's signs read "The New Inn," but the landlord proudly stated that it was very much over a hundred years old. We had our lunch at this inn and on the wall we saw paintings and engravings of old scenes.

We were tempted to stay the night. We had booked to go on to Ulcombe. No coaches, carriages or in fact any conveyances were allowed on the one and only street of Clovelly. The trunks or baggage and supplies for the shop-

were conveyed on a sled with one small donkey for motive power. An old man very English owned this outfit. All together Clovelly was worth while. It is said there is only one Clovelly and we hope that many of our friends may visit it when in England.

FILMS AND STAGE IN BERLIN

BERLIN. — Statistics covering the theatrical season in Germany from September, 1930, to August, 1931, show that the film has not as yet made any serious inroads on the legitimate stage. On an average 278 theaters played every month during the period covered. This is but 19 fewer than in the preceding year. About 6,000 new manuscripts were submitted by dramatists, but only 340 were played for the first time, against 402 in 1929-30.

Indispensable

TEMPORARY breakdowns of telephone service occur so seldom they serve as vivid reminders of the way in which this complicated modern way of living has come to depend upon it. Without thought or question it is accepted as one of the necessities. That it should not always be instantly at command has come to seem incredible. The loss of its means not only delay and discomfort, but often may mean a peril to health.

In one sense it is a striking tribute to the excellence of telephone service that people feel lost and bewildered when it is broken off. They kick about the service and complain about the rates when the phone is working, and when it is out of order, swear they would pay 10 times as much for service one-tenth as good.

A whole generation has grown up to which the telephone appears indispensable. It is accepted almost as if it were a gift of nature. Only when something goes wrong with it do its users stop to realize that it is the result of inventive skill and the application of vast capital. Some people rashly say it adds to the annoyances of life, but it is certain that without it this complicated civilization would be far more complicated.

This system of communication has been wrought into the very fiber and substance of modern life. It is one of those great conveniences, or blessings, of which people think little until they are deprived of them.

Comparable with the telephone is the radio, automobile, highways good 12 months of the year, electricity, gas, efficient police and a well-equipped, well-manned fire department.

"The CZARINA'S RUBIES"

READ THIS FIRST

Frank Severn has been kidnapped from his country home, Beggar's Court, apparently by persons trying to steal the fabulous and sinister Czarina Rubies. Severn's friend, Jim Wynter, enlists the help of Bill Grayson, a lawyer, and they search the grounds, discovering a secret stairway and a locked door in the ruins of an ancient chapel. While they plan to force the door a wall collapses, burying it under tons of masonry. They suspect Martin, a servant of Severn's, of dynamiting the wall. They begin to doubt also the sincerity of Sant, Severn's attorney.

In a village nearby they meet an ex-convict, Isham, who goes on crutches. Also they encounter a mysterious Dr. Martell, whose presence Martin, the servant, tries for some reason to conceal.

Grayson's wife and Katharine Faring, to whom the rubies rightfully belong by inheritance from her Russian grandfather, return to London while the two men plan to search Beggar's Court again at night. Wynter discovers Isham, his crutches laid aside, examining a motor boat in a boathouse. Martin and a thug named Frome try to shoot Wynter, who outwits and captures them. In the library Wynter finds an unsigned letter addressed to himself, which some one has opened and hidden away. It warns him that Sant is untrustworthy. He returns it to its hiding place.

NOW GO ON

CHAPTER XL

The door opened and the big smiling man bustled in with a tray of glasses and a decanter.

"Sorry to have been such a duce of a time. But I had to go up to find out from Martin where I could lay my hands on anything to drink. The wretched man was changing out of a ruined suit of clothes—and his wife was there, too, in floods of tears, to make things damper still because he's got the order of the boot!" remarked Sant.

Not, of course, that Martin had really been dismissed. As his hearers were quite well aware, all Sant's bluster in the grounds had merely been the decorative window-dressing that an awkward contrivance had demanded.

REASON TO FEAR

Sant spoke with his breezy laugh, but behind it a scarcely concealed nervousness was apparent to his two guests. He put the whisky decanter and siphon on the table and invited them to help themselves.

Had the remembrance of that carelessly left tell-tale envelope recurred to him whilst out of the room, to touch him with a sudden uneasy fear? As Jim added a splash of soda water to his whisky, his eyes followed the movements of his host that a tilted mirror on the wall reflected—saw Sant, as if casually, edge toward the waste paper basket.

What he had found in the letter must already have given Felix Sant a very bad jolt. To know that someone else, some unknown person, suspected the truth and had written of these suspicions to Severn's closest friend! He could suppress this letter—but that anonymous correspondent might write again, a letter he would possibly be unable to suppress. Jim did not envy Sant's state of mind, with the unenvying thought of the unknown figure in the dark, man or woman, who suspected the truth.

Sant's eyes had espied the envelope. In the mirror Jim saw him hastily retrieve it, doubtless with immense relief, and thrust it into his pocket.

Some of Sant's usual fauntipnes was back as he returned to the table.

"Helping yourselves, I hope? Yes, old Felix won't refuse a shot, too—feels he needs one. That narrow escape of yours tonight Wynter, from those two blundering fools. . . thank God, you came through an unenvying experience with no harm done!" the older man cried emotionally. "Well, here's wishing you all the best!"

Jim had to be responsive, had to raise his glass, against which Sant clinked his own with an effusive air of genial good fellowship.

But knowing the man as he did now, knowing all the knew now, to poison for him the very atmosphere of this house, Jim Wynter would have liked to put his glass down untasted.

"But you aren't going to run off yet," cried Sant, when a few minutes later Bill Grayson looked at his watch.

"Well, I think we ought to be making a move in the next few minutes. It'll be late enough by the time we get back to town," Bill said. "You're staying the night here, I suppose, Sant."

"I fancy I shan't turn out again tonight. That's one advantage of being a bachelor. I have only my own wishes to consult!" laughed Sant. "Really, I ran over here this afternoon partly with an idea of snatching an early round of golf first thing tomorrow, to take my mind off this infernal business before I go back to the office. That's why Beggar's Court seems more of me than it otherwise would," Sant added, referring to an admirable golf course in the neighborhood.

"Well, we don't seem much nearer a solution of the Severn mystery," said Bill suddenly, "or why these unknown criminals should murder Creyke—and then spirit the dead man away from Monksilver after their crime was known. Have you any theories, Sant?"

Sant was pouring himself out a second drink. As Bill Grayson made the abrupt reference to Creyke, his hand seemed oddly shaky; he spilt some of the whisky on the table.

STRAINED

"Hopelessly in the dark, my dear chap." His voice was a little jerky and strained. "One can only hope that some unexpected clue may turn up."

"Of course. Only you don't think it very hopeful, do you?"

Sant shook his head.

Jim Wynter sat smoking almost in silence, as the other two went on talking.

Until yesterday Sant was almost the last man he would have suspected; this genial popular figure, always the best of company and apparently the kindest of souls, and much in demand at functions held in aid of this or that benevolent cause. Following an after-dinner speech, moving his hearers now to laughter, now to a sudden lump in the throat, hard-faced men would be surprised at their own liberal response to his appeal.

And Sant guilty of that shameful betrayal of his friend—the moving spirit behind this plot against Frank Severn, the associated murder of Creyke!

Even yet it seemed almost unbelievable.

That first suspicion had flashed across Jim Wynter on his return to Monksilver from Dr. Martell's house. At first he had told himself that he would not even take Bill Grayson into his confidence, that Bill without further proof would only laugh at a suspicion seemingly so monstrous. But Bill, with his trained legal mind, his long experience of the criminal, had not laughed.

Those cobwebs on the door at Monksilver.

Sant had been the first at the door, had taken care, no doubt, to be the first, as he had taken care to be seen supposedly flicking away a network of cobwebs there. A very subtle ruse. A door festooned with ancient unbroken webs—how could it have been opened as lately as the night before?

Of course—it was as plain to Jim Wynter now as it had been puzzling at the time—Sant had hoped to discount in advance his story of having found Creyke murdered in Monksilver, or of having been inside that house; had tried subtly to make the whole story appear to the police as nothing more than the delusion of a man whose drugged senses had played him a trick.

OBVIOUS

Only the unexpected proof of that jade and pearl necklace, with its conclusive evidence that he must have been at Monksilver, had been a factor for which Sant had not bargained.

And because of his certain knowledge that he had passed through that door barely fifteen hours before, Jim Wynter had known too, beyond doubt, that Sant could not have found that door as he professed, cobwebbed-up. Just a trick to deceive them, his pretence of flicking loose those cobwebs that had already been torn and broken when the door had been opened on the previous night.

It was in sudden realization that for some reason Sant had lied that had first started the train of suspicion in Jim Wynter's mind, wild as that suspicion seemed of a man he had liked and had never had the faintest cause before to mistrust.

But certainly Sant must have lied. And then in the light of that dawning suspicion, other odd facts. Sant professed skepticism that he, Wynter, had found Creyke murdered, as if he were anxious to implant seeds of doubt beforehand in the minds of the police, to germinate when they should find no dead man away from Monksilver. Other facts too. . . . Well, tonight had proved beyond all question that his suspicion had been right.

Just as tonight had shown that hostilities had been opened on him.

Had Frome's attempt on his life been inspired by this man whom he had known for years and liked, and who had just clinked friendly glasses with him?

Or had it been instigated without Sant's knowledge by Martell? Martell who might have recognized his voice on the telephone and seen the first flash of the red dangerlight? Sant, Martell, Martin, Frome!

The time was not yet ripe for them to be swept into the net, but perhaps soon, very soon now!

EXCUSES

Jim Wynter dragged himself out of these preoccupied thoughts, as something Sant was saying caught his ears.

"Of course, I was furious about what happened tonight," Sant was speaking of, "but I can't help the man's all nerves—and small wonder, really, after all that's happened at this lonely place. One must make allowances for that, eh?"

If Sant hoped for encouragement, from Bill Grayson, he found the other disappointingly aloof. Bill smoked in stolid silence.

"I suppose I'm an impulsive soft-hearted fool in some things," went on Sant, "but I couldn't help feeling sorry for the man just now—and still more for his wife. In fact, I may as well admit I held out a vague hope to her. Mind you, I'm not excusing Martin; far from it. But—well, I told his wife that I might reconsider the matter of Martin's dismissal."

Jim smiled inwardly. Just what he had known Sant would say, with the way to be paved for Martin's continued presence at Beggar's Court!

"Well, why not? he rejoined carelessly. "After all, I didn't lose as much as a feather during their exciting target practice. And in any case I've decided not to prosecute."

After all, if their plans turned out as he hoped, Martin and Frome—and others—would find themselves in the grip of the law before very long on a more serious charge still. He was not unwilling to give them more rope. It might only hamper those plans to bring these two men into court.

eral recent song hits they gave were, "I want to be Loved," the tap dancing of Miss Janice Reice was about the best that has been seen here in some time. A clever acrobatic dance was given by Miss Jennie Waldron.

Miss Kathryn Purcell, the Irish Nightingale, was well received by the audience - singing "Smiling Irish Eyes."

All in all it was a well balanced musical novelty singing and dancing presentation, and one that should please the most fastidious.

AT THE CLIFTONA

"The Ruling Voice," the much-heralded true story of the inner workings of the milk trust with Walter Huston in the role of the big boss of the ruthless game is now to be seen at the Cliftona Theater.

First National in using the brilliant story by Rowland V. and Donald W. Lee, has given the dynamic Mr. Huston a highly melodramatic vehicle. They have also surrounded him with a great cast which includes Loretta Young, Doris Kenyon, David Manners, John Halliday, Dudley Digges, Gilbert Emery, Willard Robertson and the remarkable child actor, Douglas Scott.

Walter Huston plays the part of Bannister — relentless head of an organization which decent citizens try in vain to break. It is the coming of Gloria his daughter, who has been educated abroad in ignorance of the source of her father's wealth; that makes him pause in his mad course. The girl leaves him when she finds the truth—complications of breathless intensity follow—and the man who wanted to leave his gang — even as lesser fry of the underworld have found—comes up against greater obstacles than even he could have imagined.

AT THE CIRCLE

Vera Reynolds, lovely young actress furnishes the beauty and romantic interest in "Holl Bent For Frisco," a newspaper and gangster story produced under direction of Stuart Paton for Sono Art-World Wide release, coming to Circle Theater.

Miss Reynolds plays the part of Ellen, the young society girl for whose sake a newspaperman soves the mystery of a sensational shooting.

The actress began her career in the days of silent pictures, rising to fame for her portrayal in Cecil B. DeMille's famous production, "Feet of Clay."

Following is a clipping from a Marietta newspaper lauding the show.

(Girl Orchestra at Hipp has good act.)

Tonight makes the final appearance on the Hipp stage of the "Rhythm Queens" Girls orchestra. For an all young women musical unit to make a fifty five minute stage presentation pass the boards with alarming speed is something to write home about. Their song and novelty numbers were that fast and equally as well done.

There are, ten in the act, two of whom carry off the dancing numbers. Seemingly every member of the troupe can do something in a most capable and satisfactory manner.

An enthusiastic okay must be given the harmony singing of the Wausart sisters. Among the sev-

Mother Martha Shops-

One wonders, sometimes, how the farmer and his wife get so much accomplished when so few of them have the electrical conveniences we are accustomed to in town. But I found that there are other ways of doing things than electrically when I saw the gas engines at Barrere and Nickerson with which either the farmer or his wife can accomplish much. This store has the Fairday washing machines, gas engines, platform scales and farm scales. The most popular priced cream separators are the De Laval at $95 to $115. And Barrere and Nickerson have a big variety of shovels and all kinds of tools.

Here, too, I found a good line of sporting goods. I bought Henry an Official Boy Scout knife for $1.50 and John a football. They cost from $4.00 to $12.00. Dorothy wants to go in for golf, this next golf season, but as she knows more about it than I do, I'll let her choose her outfit. Sticks range in price from $2.00 to $15.00, bags from $3.50 to $15.00. And there are the Spalding line of tennis rackets at this store. Marion wants one.

When I went in a Davidson's Hardware Company I was attracted by the roomy display. The shining array of aluminum ware and electrical appliances, to say nothing of the beautiful Aladdin lamps, was pleasing. And one of the slogans here is that their goods are all in the house—not out in the weather. For the home with neither electricity or gas, these Aladdin lamps are fine. They range in price from $10.00 to $17.75. Elsie, my next door neighbor, loves birds and I have a half a notion to get her a new cage here. They cost $2.15 and $3.00. And as to kitchen cutlery and utensils, Davidson's have a splendid line. I found several things I've been wanting. They have sturdy tricycles for $7.50 and $9.75 and wagons for $3.50 and $4.65. And this store carries the Sherwin-Williams paints and the Roger's Brushing Lacquer.

At Cussins and Fearn I found an infinite variety of things. Children's roll-top desks for from $5.65 to one at $12.50 with two drawers and a swivel chair, black boards, $2.48, and $3.48; wicker chairs, $2.27 to $4.88; Reliance wagons, $3.49; tricycles, $2.69 and bicycles, $2.95. And the tables of smaller toys were full of novelties. There was a doll in a box with a set of clothes—socks, shoes, two voile dresses, undies, bonnet and flannel dress and tam, beside the pajamas she has on and all of it for $1.00. For boys there was a Silver Bullet racing car, 98 cents; a train engine which runs by friction, $1.38; a very popular little tractor which pulls itself up over anything, 98 cents or $1.19; aeroplanes; building blocks, $1.19; drums, 89 cents; and a clever little French phone which rings and which, when you pick it up, says, "Hello."

There are baseballs, bats, and paraphernalia of all kinds for the outdoor boy. There are books and miniature household equipment for the indoor girl, and for the family there are radios, the Silver Marshall, $56.35 to $119.00, or the Fearnola for $47.50. And if you are looking for a first class bridge table you will find one here for $2.98. It is all steel with a leather non-burnable top.

It is hard to do justice to the hard ware type of store but one always knows, when there are good ones in town, that he can get the new fixture for the house or the screw which is missing, to say nothing of paper and paint. And that satisfaction is ours because we have such splendid hardware stores in Circleville.

Schick Test Invaluable In Checking Diphtheria

This Most Dreaded Disease Has Been Proved Preventable Through Immunization, Says Dr. Copeland, Urging Parents to Protect Their Children.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M.D.
United States Senator from New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

DIPHTHERIA used to be one of the most dreaded of all diseases. It afflicted young and old. Fifty years ago the deaths in this country from diphtheria were about 115 persons out of every 100,000 of the population. Last year there were less than six persons out of every 100,000.

I am happy to say that because of immunization this disease can now be prevented. By means of the "Schick test" we can determine whether a person will contract the disease if exposed to diphtheria.

This is a simple and painless procedure. It can be given by any physician, or by the local health officer. The test consists of injecting into the skin a tiny drop of toxin. This causes a welt, or swelling. If this swelling disappears quickly, the test is regarded as "negative." If the spot turns red and stays red for about a week or longer, the test is called "positive." When the test is positive it means that the individual, unless immunized, can contract the disease.

Answers to Health Queries

F. M. S. Q.—What should a girl of 14, 5 feet 1 inch tall, weigh?

2.—What will reduce the hips and abdomen?

3.—What will eradicate warts on the hands?

4.—How can I get rid of excessive hair on the arms and legs?

A.—She should weigh about 108 pounds. This would be about average for one of her age and height as determined by examination of a large number of persons.

2.—Exercise and proper diet should bring about general results. For full particulars send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat your question.

value in saving the lives of children. If all children were tested and immunized against diphtheria the disease would be completely eradicated. This protection can be given at any age even to a baby when but six months old.

The immunization is produced by the injection of a substance called "toxin-anti-toxin." Three injections are given at weekly intervals. There are no serious after effects from this treatment and often the child is unaware of the injection.

Scientists agree that no child should be denied this protection. It is believed, too, that the injections should be given as early as possible. The reason for this is that diphtheria is most dangerous between the ages of six months and five years. Please remember that few children are naturally immune to diphtheria. If a child is immune to diphtheria that is all the better, of course, but the fact can only be determined by the Schick test.

If your child has received a Schick test and it was found to be positive, do not hesitate or delay the injections. If your child has not been "Schicked," attend to the matter at once.

Bear in mind that diphtheria is definitely preventable. But the means of protection for your child can be applied only by your consent.

Parents who have children under school age should talk with the family doctor or health officer about this important measure. This protection is within the reach of everyone. There is no excuse for not protecting your child from diphtheria.

A DAILY READER. Q.—What can be done for pimples and blackheads? I have had my diseased tonsils removed but there is no improvement in my complexion. The operation was done about six weeks ago.

A.—It is possible that the blemishes will clear up as soon as your system has been entirely cleared of all infection. The diet and elimination are important factors under the circumstances. For further particulars send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat your question.

L. E. P. Q.—What will bleach freckles and how should it be used?

A.—Equal parts of lemon juice and peroxide will bleach freckles but the preparation may prove drying to the skin. In this case apply a good cold cream after each treatment.

A LITTLE JOURNEY with BOB WHITE

This time it is to one of the quaintest little villages in all of England. The old lumbering stage coach-driven by a stout rosey cheeked old Englishman. His costume was corduroy knee breeches, a scarlet coat and high white hat. The four prancing horses were aware that the driver considered himself of great importance. It was a lovely day in June, our seat was outside the beautiful hills and valleys of Devonshire. A boy of about twelve years sat beside me and of course asked many questions. My answers always meant to encourage his friendship.

This boy said his name was George Wardwell and his home was in Devonshire about ten miles from the quaint little village we were bound for. When I mentioned America he was quite alive as his father had recently informed him that they were to go to America as soon as their English holdings were disposed of. This boy was just returning home after a visit to friends in London. He was still more interested when he learned that our hotel had been on the strand and quite near to the market and that we had made several early morning visits to this market, and that we were enthusiastic over the beautiful flowers.

We were then nearing the stage coach yard, where the drivers were putting their horses in the sheds to be fed and watered. As we alighted from the coach, a white haired red coated old master of the reins came up and spoke to the boy, calling him, "The little gentleman" and asking for his father. The boy was much pleased and said good-bye. I was quite happy as this boy had visited this strange little village and said he never tired of it. This quaint place is "Clovelly," known as "the most exquisite town in England." Clovelly's quaintness has made it widely known. The street or road to the entrance of Clovelly proper was wide. A row of tall old trees bordering it on each side.

bordering it on each side. When we reached the entrance and stood more than a hundred feet above the sea, we were greeted with a view of the ocean and sky. We will never forget Clovelly, it is built in a wide ravine, with a cobbles street down to the sea. On each side of this road the houses and inns are built all of them with porches and on the rails are boxes and pots of some of England's bright red flowers.

One of the Inn's signs read The New Inn, but the landlord proudly stated that it was very much over a hundred years old. We had our lunch at this inn and on the wall we saw paintings and engravings as old as the inn.

We were tempted to stay the night out. We had booked to go on to Ilfracombe. No coaches or conveyances were allowed on the one and only street of Clovelly. The trunks or luggage and supplies for the ships were conveyed on a sled with one small donkey for motive power. An old man very English owned this outfit. All together Clovelly was worth while. It is said there is only one Clovelly and we hope that many of our friends may visit it when in England.

Sincerely yours,
Bob White.

FILMS AND STAGE IN BERLIN

BERLIN. — Statistics covering the theatrical season in Germany from September, 1930, to August, 1931, show that the film has not as yet made any serious inroads on the legitimate stage. On an average 278 theaters played every month during the period covered. This is but 19 fewer than in the preceding year. About 6,000 new manuscripts were submitted by dramatists, but only 340 works were played for the first time, against 402 in 1929-30.

New Lex Giants Defeat Clubmen

Playing under plenty of handicaps, physically, Circleville Athletic Club basketball team went down to defeat before the onslaughts of a superior New Lexington team Wednesday evening on the latter court. The score was 56-28 but followers of the Club team are not discouraged by the showing of the local aggregation.

The only difference in the two teams was the size of the contestants. Jimmy Bathis, New Lexington generalissimo, put a team on the court four members of which were more than six feet in height. The other was Nolan Swackhammer, crack former Ohio U. forward, who with his diminutiveness is one of the toughest men on central Ohio courts to guard. The other four men were Gene Mechling, former Capital U. star and high point man in the Ohio conference, George Van Heyde, former Ohio State University ace, Walter Harrop, man-mountain from Muskingum college and White, a satellite of Carnegie Tech.

What chance the club had wasn't much and the locals were admired by the kind of game they put up during the greater portion of the tilt.

The contest started fast with New Lexington leading only 12-9 at the end of the first period. The margin was six points at the half when the count was 24-18. From then on it was too bad.

Gene Mechling led the New Lex scorers with 10 goals and 1 free throw. About 99 percent of the New Lex points came on shots under the basket with height having plenty to do with the scoring.

Morgan of New Lexington refereed.

New Lexington's team, one of the crack combinations of central Ohio, will play a return game with the Club here on Jan. 7.

LETTERS TO EDITOR

To the Editor of The Herald: THE PASSING OF CITIZEN HOWARD NORTH (By a Neighbor)

The death of Howard North of this city, deserves more than a passing notice.

When the writer first came to Circleville some fifteen years ago, "Howard," as he was familiarly addressed by neighbors and friends, was the sexton of the First M. E. church of this city.

He was a faithful and dependable care-taker of the church property and was popular with the congregation. He was a consistent member of the church he served, as he was a member, also, of the Brotherhood.

Howard North was industrious to a fault, perhaps, his industry being directed by more than average intelligence. He was the head of a family for which he provided generously and for which, also, he had provided a pleasant and comfortable home and surroundings.

Only a short time previous to the accident that terminated in his death, he called the writer into his yard and exhibited to him, with a pardonable pride, a rockery and pool which he had just completed and which compares favorably, in not a few respects, with the more pretentious attractions of similar character.

And finer and more commendable than all else, he was sober and law abiding. He was proud of his family and desired that his children might grow up to become respected citizens of the community. Like thousands of Methodists, he had had the experience of conversion and he continued to have faith in the efficacy of a genuine Christianity.

Born and brought up in a more or less obscure and unpretentious environment, he was content to live and labor among those he best understood and who best understood him. The poet Gray must have had such a man in mind when he wrote:

Far from the madding crowd's ignoble strife, (His) sober wishes never learned to stray; Along the cool sequestered vale of life, (He) kept the noiseless tenor of his way.

BEHIND the SCENE In HOLLYWOOD

By HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, Cal. — Romance has looked up in Hollywood in 1931. According to my count, there were 27 film weddings during the year, while only 16 marital barks hit the rocks.

It also should be worthy of note that one couple, the James Gleasons, celebrated their twenty-fifth anniversary.

Some of the most glamorous stars in flandom are now embarked on that notoriously trying first year. For instance, Constance Bennett and the Marquis Henry de la Falaise; Gloria Swanson and Michael Farmer; Winifred Coe and Richard Dix; June Collyer and Stuart Erwin; Carole Lombard and William Powell; Dorothy Mackaill and Neil Miller; Virginia Valli and Charles Farrell; Helen Twelvetrees and Frank Wooddy (they were married twice, March 21 in Reno and April 21 in Santa Cruz); Clara Bow and Rex Bell; Kay Francis and Kenneth MacKenzie; Mary Astor and Dr. Franklin Thorpe; Lola Lane and Lew Ayres; Nancy Carroll and Bolton Mallory; and Mrs. Rea Langham and Clark Gable.

Other film marriages of the year were: Janet Gattis and John McCormick (since divorced); Marjorie Moss and Edmund Goulding; Nan Sutherland and Walter Huston; Virginia Shelley and Frank Albertson; Beatrice Powers and James Kirkwood; Eleanor Melvyn and John McCloy; and June Marbury and Francis Gudgey; Mary Nolan and Wallace Macrery; Dorothy Appleby and Morgan Gallo-way; Rita La Roy and Ben Herschfeld; Arline Judre and Wesley Ruggles and Hazel Woolf and Lewis Stone.

On the other side of the ledger are the cooled-off romances of Helene Costello and Lowell Sherman; Estelle Taylor and Jack Dempsey; Janet Gattis and John McCormick; Frances Marion and George Hill; Grace and Lawrence Tibbett; Ann and Don Alvarado; Dorothy Lee and Jimmie Fidler; Irene Rich and David Blankenhorn; Loretta Young and Grant Withers; Ginger Rogers and Jack Pepper; Fay Claire and Jack Gilbert; Jean Kent and Robert Armstrong; Edna Murphy and Mervyn Leroy; Edna May Oliver and D. W. Pratty (separated several years but divorce filed this year); Frances Beranger and Don Cook and the Cliff Edwardses.

LATEST GOSSIP.

Virginia Bruce (Ziegfeld took her East and M. G. M. hired her back) and Robert Young are that way ... Danny Danker is going with Drucilla Dunn ... Maureen

O'Sullivan says she's between romances ... Warner Brothers are seeking doubles for Mayor Jimmie Walker and Grover Whalen ... Phillips Holmes is on his way to New York by boat. He continues on to England ... A fiery-haired Los Angeles girl got a screen test because she had a fight with her husband in a restaurant. Director Marcel de Sano happened to be in the next booth and was so impressed by her fervor that he asked her to come out to M. G. M. and try out for the role in "The Red-Headed Woman" ... One-eyed Connolly showed up the other day with his thumb bandaged. Someone asked him what was the matter. "Fitch-hiker's thumb," he explained, gesturing expressively.

MOTTON REACHED.

Times are so tough, says Harry Brand, that a friend of his is going to Death Valley on his vacation.

IS THIS BRAGGING?

Walter Huston was telling a friend of an accident when he fell thirty feet from a scaffold on the set.

"Did all your sins flash through your mind?" cracked the friend. "Good heavens no!" exclaimed Huston. "I fell only 30 feet."

HE CAN'T DASH IT OUT BUT HE CAN'T TAKE IT.

Despite the fact he is chairman of the British Lion Film Company and has had several of his stories produced, Edgar Wallace confesses he has never seen one of his pictures.

"My first story to reach the screen was 'The Man Who Bought London,'" says Wallace. "It had ten murders. I sat through the first three and then walked out. I have never been back to see another of my pictures."

Even when he directed his story, "The Squealer," he never saw anything but the rushes, the author declares.

Wallace will be out here at RKO until the latter part of February. He returns to London at that time to stage his new play.

BEHIND the SCENE In HOLLYWOOD

By HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, Cal. — Romance has looked up in Hollywood in 1931. According to my count, there were 27 film weddings during the year, while only 16 marital barks hit the rocks.

It also should be worthy of note that one couple, the James Glensons, celebrated their twenty-fifth anniversary.

Some of the most glamorous stars in filmdom are now embarked on that notoriously trying first year. For instance, Constance Bennett and the Marquis Henry de la Falaise; Gloria Swanson and Michael Farmer; Winifred Coe and Richard Dix; June Collyer and Stuart Erwin; Carole Lombard and William Powell; Dorothy MacKall and Neil Miller; Virginia Valli and Charles Farrell; Helen Twelvetrees and Frank Woody (they were married twice, March 21 in Reno and April 21 in Santa Cruz); Clara Bow and Rex Bell; Kay Francis and Kenneth Macken;

Mary Astor and Dr. Franklin Thorpe; Lola Lane and Lew Ayres; Nancy Carroll and Bolton Mallory; and Mrs. Rea Langham and Clark Gable.

Other film marriages of the year were: Janet Gattis and John McCormick (since divorced); Marjorie Moss and Edmund Goulding; Nan Sutherland and Walter Huston; Virginia Shelley and Frank Albertson; Beatrice Powers and James Kirkwood; Eleanor Merrey and Tom Moore; June McCloy and Schuyler Schenck; Marjorie Rambeau and Francis Gudge; Mary Nolan and Wallace Macrery; Dorothy Appleby and Morgan Gallo-way; Rita La Roy and Ben Herschfield; Arline Judge and Wesley Ruggles and Hazel Woolf and Lewis Stone.

On the other side of the ledger are the cooled-off romances of Helene Costello and Lowell Sherman; Estelle Taylor and Jack Dempsey; Janet Gattis and John McCormick; Frances Marion and George Hill; Grace and Lawrence Tibbett; Ann and Don Alvarado; Dorothy Lee and Jimmie Fidler; Irene Rich and David Blankenhorn; Loretta Young and Grant Withers; Ginger Rogers and Jack Pepper; Ina Claire and Jack Gilbert; Jean Kent and Robert Armstrong; Edna Murphy and Mervyn Leroy; Edna May Oliver and D. W. Pratty (separated several years but divorce filed this year); Frances Beranger and Don Cook and the Cliff Edwardses.

LATEST GOSSIP.

Virginia Bruce (Ziegfeld took her East and M. G. M. hired her back) and Robert Young are that way. Danny Danker is going with Drucilla Dunn. Maureen
